DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. This application has been re-assigned to a primary examiner. The newly assigned examiner agrees with Applicants' position that the bases for requiring restriction which were set forth in the previously issued Office Action were insufficient. Accordingly, the restriction requirement is hereby withdrawn, and all claims previously withdrawn have been rejoined and are under active consideration.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

2. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

3. Claims 1-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the language of the claims raise a question as to whether the claim is directed merely to an abstract idea that is not tied to a technological art, environment or machine which would result in a practical application producing a concrete, useful, and tangible result to form the basis of statutory subject matter under 35 U.S.C. 101. Restated, method claims 1-12 are broad enough to read on algorithms or series of mental steps. Similarly, product claims 13-19 read on software subroutines; as such, the claims are not directed towards patentable subject matter.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

4. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

5. Claims 1-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Heckerman '891.

See e.g., FIG 18 which depicts a flow-chart algorithm or method of analyzing a sub-model (information stored within memory 304) of a full model system (information stored within MBN generator 502) and a system for analyzing the same comprising computing means for performing all of the claimed steps within the sub-system. For example, the memory 304 is programmed to define the sub-model as a collection of entities 602, 604, 606, 608, 610 and 508. The memory 304 is programmed to determine which of the entities in the sub-model are calculation entities and which are data entities. Calculation entities of the scoring mechanism are converted into temporary data entities or scores 604. The network adjuster 606 identifies output entities in the sub-model which are directed to the MBN 508. The memory 304 analyzes the submodel by performing these calculations. The limitations of the dependent claims are also depicted disclosed in this algorithm. For example,

- a. the scoring mechanism receives data from the permanent storage 306 at one time period t1, and then stops receiving data at a second time period t2 while performing the calculations. The function of stopping the receipt of data reads on claim 2's language of "deleting connecting arcs directed to the temporary data entities."

b. The subsystem also contains isolated cycles (e.g., 602 → 604 → 606 → 608/610 → 602) in the submodel. The network adjuster also functions at a different time as an output entity to the MBN 508.

Response to Arguments

6. Applicant's arguments with respect to the claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
